The Owl and the Missing Moon

Every night, a little owl looks at the moon. Tonight, the sky is dark. He cannot see his bright friend.

"Where is the moon?" he asks a squirrel. They look behind a tall tree. They look above a little house. The moon is not there.

The owl flies to the pond. Sometimes he sees the moon in the water. But tonight, he only sees a dark cloud.

The squirrel sits beside him. "Look up," she says. The wind moves the cloud. A small white light appears in the sky.

"There you are!" says the owl. The moon shines on the pond again. The two friends sit together and watch it. Tomorrow, the owl can wait for the clouds to move.
